National Youth Stampede 2018

Eighty young beef enthusiasts were treated to an educational Youth Stampede at Dubbo during the Nationals. With competitors from across the nation it truly was a national event. The committee ran a program highly orientated to education within the cattle industry as well as highlighting opportunities to enter the industry in the future. Coupled with the physical side of caring and exhibiting their animal the program again produced a successful outcome.

This year the format changed and our Stampede competitors were able to participate in the Pickles Auctions National Showcase and Allflex National Sale with the Paraders Classes the final event. This format change allowed a new marketing section to be included for the Intermediate and Senior entrants. These competitors were given assignments relating to cattle in the National Sale. The senior section were asked to be consultants and recommend within a budget sale lots for a breeder to establish a stud and outline the basis of their selection. This assignment was outside their other activities introducing more time management processes into the program.

The Society extends a vote of appreciation to Nicole Nicholls and Nattel Kempf for their workload in formatting the Stampede educational program. Kristie O'Brien again provided new team bonding challenges for the first night and these were enjoyed by participants and spectators alike. A relay between senior entrants and five parents (who will remain anon.) was extremely interesting with the parents just scrapping in.

The Society also extends their appreciation to the educational session leaders for their time commitment. We try and alter the program each year aside from the basics of cattle handling and the educational program delivered in the constraints of time was first class. Parents and friends are welcome to attend the sessions and many took the opportunity.

This year Greg and Leonie Ball capably undertook the judging of the Herdsman awards and James McWilliam and Hannah Powe judged Paraders and Junior Judging respectively. Both James and Hannah have come through similar programs and it is pleasing to see their contribution back to our junior programs.
